

8 Things to Consider When Renovating Your House

House renovations have become common these days, with people wanting to remodel their space with up-to-date features and amenities. However, the process takes a great deal of understanding and knowledge to build a beautiful home, without having to burn a hole in your pockets. It's very different from a 'DIY Home Restyling' video on YouTube or a reality TV show giving free tips.

So, before your house renovation turns into a disaster, consider this:

Do the budgeting

The budget should be the primary step in any house renovation project. You must know how much to spare before you begin to employ professionals for each task. Do the homework! Talk to friends and family who have got some rebuilding done themselves and do detailed research about market pricing for multiple services. Keeping a buffer amount over and above your budget makes it easy to pay for the miscellaneous expenses that you could incur in the process.

Hire professional help

There is no shortcut to a remodeling project and not all DIY projects end up being as good as they seem on the internet. So, let's be realistic, to have a perfect house renovation in Malaysia, you must hire a professional with a strong portfolio. Then again, research about their previous clients to make sure you are choosing the right one.

Make sure your renovation model is future proof

Trends tend to change and let's accept it that the house renovation done today may go obsolete in the future, if not done properly. Invest more in the quality finishes over trendy elements. The key is to be classic in every way possible since that could stay with you the longest.

Go through local building codes and regulations for your area thoroughly

House renovation in Malaysia requires homeowners to abide by the community guidelines if they are doing anything with the exteriors of it. You must know the local building codes if you are doing a terrace or house renovations for a pool or adding any structural components to the building.

Don't go after the quicker and cheaper

It is often those who work the quickest and at the cheapest rates end up with the most brutal injuries of home renovation in Malaysia.

Add more storage this time

Redesigning homes means more decluttering of the old and adding new spaces. It is time for you to maximize your capacity by adding more storage spaces. From kitchen to bathroom to the bedroom, try to clean up and amplify your storage. You could get cabinets built or add a little do-it-yourself glam from recycled material that was left after the reconstruction process.

Have more windows for the golden hour and the magic hour

If most of your day demands for you to stay inside, you must be able to have a view of the outside. So, while doing the home renovation in Malaysia, add large windows. But, if your budget doesn't allow you to do so, play around with the paint. Paint a wall a shade lighter than the other walls of the room to boost the amount of light entering.

Enjoy the process

House renovation is not all gloomy or stressful. There's nothing more satisfying than watching a space be turned into an artwork. So, you must appreciate the outcomes in the peace and calm of your new space.

We help supervise and manage your house renovation tasks such that the entire journey towards reaching the house of your dreams seems less strenuous and rather desirable! So if you want to avoid the common mistakes everyone makes while renovating and are in search of a friend that can help you in this journey, visit our website- www.supervisor.my or call 60329359325 to talk with our experts. You may Whatsapp us anytime on 60193665353!